

The voice of responsible shareowners

---

Press release.

---

For immediate release

PIRC Corporate Governance and Responsible Investment Journalism Awards 2012 winners announced

The winners of the PIRC Corporate Governance and Responsible Investment Journalism Awards 2012 have been announced.

The Corporate Governance Journalist of the Year is James Quinn of the Sunday Telegraph.

The Responsible Investment Journalist of the Year is Ellie Winninghoff.

This is the third year the awards have been presented, and they have been organised and sponsored by PIRC and Robbins Geller Rudman & Dowd LLP. There was an increase in entries to the awards once again this year.

Alan MacDougall, PIRC's managing director, said: "This year has seen unprecedented media interest in the relationship between companies and shareholders, with events in the so-called 'shareholder spring' making national news. We are delighted to be supporting the work of those journalists who are bringing these important issues to public attention. We've seen a further increase in the number of entries to the awards, making it a tough competition. James and Ellie have done very well in winning their respective awards."

More information

Tom Powdrill
020 7392 7887
(07764 200896 outside office hours)

PIRC is the largest independent European provider of corporate governance, proxy voting and corporate social responsibility investment research and advisory services. Our clients include pension funds and fund managers with combined assets of over £1.5 trillion.